We describe a sensitive and rapid enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) for detection of a single nucleotide polymorphism (SNP) at the TNF-alpha promoter. Each allele at the position -308 of TNF-alpha promoter could be detected by this method with high reproducibility and little cross-reaction. The detection limit was 1 x 10(-10) M of wild-type and variant SNP and the cost was only 6 US dollars per test.The endocrinological and haematological effects of paroxetine and sertraline. Paroxetine (a selective serotonin reuptake inhibitor) is a new antidepressant. The aim of the present study was to compare the endocrine and haematological effects of sertraline (an imipramine-like antidepressant with a lower affinity for the serotonin transporter) with those of paroxetine in a group of depressed patients. Forty-eight depressed patients were studied. Patients were assessed by means of a structured clinical interview and rating scales before and at the end of an 8-week open trial. Sertraline (200 mg/day) was significantly more effective than paroxetine (40 mg/day) in reducing the scores on the Hamilton Depression Rating Scale (HAMD) (F = 5.31; df = 2.22; P Joseph Wechsberg Joseph C.
