Gemcitabine-induced apoptosis of human pancreatic cancer cells is correlated with activation of ERK1/2 and ERK1/2-dependent regulation of Bim protein level. We previously demonstrated that the nucleoside analog gemcitabine (GEM) inhibits growth of human pancreatic cancer cells by inducing apoptosis. Here we report that GEM-induced apoptosis is mediated by activation of the extracellular signal-regulated kinase (ERK) 1/2 mitogen-activated protein kinase (MAPK) signaling pathway and the upregulation of Bim protein expression. Treatment of MiaPaCa-2 human pancreatic cancer cells with 10 microM GEM for 4 h induced ERK1/2 activation, which persisted for 24 h after the GEM treatment. GEM-induced apoptosis of these cells was attenuated by PD98059, an inhibitor of the ERK1/2 MAPK, and by overexpression of Bim by transfection with the expression plasmid pCMV-Bim. Treatment of MiaPaCa-2 cells with GEM for 4 h upregulated Bim protein expression by two- to threefold, which was completely abolished by PD98059 and reduced to the level of untreated control cells by overexpression of Bim. We also found that the BH3 domain-deleted mutant of Bim that lacks the ability to activate
