Many of us have formed a habit of watching TNF (the King of the Ring) and the wrestling matches (and boxing matches) on PPV. We simply turn on our TV during the time the matches are on (during that time, which can be as short as 10 minutes) and start watching the live matches. I think that the wrestling matches all look the same and sometimes, it is hard to follow which wrestler is actually on. I think that this is because most of us have the same type of TV at home and we watch all wrestling on the same channel. Do you have a different experience watching TNF on PPV? If not, how about the boxing matches? Do you have the same feeling watching boxing matches on PPV? I think this is because I have seen all the matches that I have watched so many times. I believe that not everyone has the same experience watching wrestling on PPV. Do you feel the same way as well? If you do, what are some of the matches that you have noticed? I think that the wrestling matches all look the same and sometimes, it is hard to follow which wrestler is actually on. I think that this is because most of us have the same type of TV at home and we watch all wrestling on the same channel. What sort of TV is your home TV? I have a 12" Zenith and I get it at my local television sales place, but it will be up for sale soon and it cost me 180 dollars. I used to have a 32" Toshiba and that cost me 280 dollars. If I had it, I would get it for 160 dollars. Do you have a different experience watching TNF on PPV? If not, how about the boxing matches? Do you have the same feeling watching boxing matches on PPV?
