This explosion of research and development of new treatments, however, has not been accompanied by a substantial increase in the number of trained individuals in the field, and the drug abuse research community is still severely undermanned. The primary goal of this program is to identify, nurture, train and support promising drug abuse researchers at the postdoctoral level. To this end, the program provides formal training in molecular pharmacology, pharmacology, biochemistry and neuroscience, as well as access to research opportunities and mentoring. Faculty consists of a consortium of established investigators from both academia and industry who are committed to training, and to the development of new drug treatments for substance abuse and addiction. To ensure the program's success, we have created a multidisciplinary research core that is 4bc0debe42
