RAW files produce a large file that Photoshop can open and modify, but RAW files are not usually recommended for sending out for print. the country. ~~~ mturmon There is not much of a direct correlation between the number of tech workers an area has and the number of startups it produces. Zones with higher population density and that have available amenities in the tech sector may not have the same rate of startup creation. ~~~ ahartswede At the same time the H1B visa issue is probably only hindering the Bay Area. The reason I said California is because it's the largest source of H1Bs and the state with the most startups. Texas has the most, so maybe it's Texas in part. ----- hackerboos This isn't surprising since if I was in the market of hiring an engineer, I would refuse to hire anyone working under an H1B. I would rather hire an American who has the same skills and less of a need for an H1B. ----- tomcam Whether or not you support or oppose giving the jobs back to our citizens, I think this highlights the extent to which we're missing great people. Sophomore guard Justin Robinson had an iffy performance Tuesday, making just 2-of-12 shots, including 1-of-4 from three. In fact, as Robinson tried to go to the rim, he was often knocked off it by the Seminoles' packed zone, as set by guard Frankie King. Although he was guarded by a Seminole, Robinson also was guarded by a Miami guard, Daiquan Romero. Robinson had 9 rebounds, 0 blocks, 1 steal and 4-of-8 shooting. Still, Robinson did a much better job playing with and against his guards than he did with wings or centers. Can he make a difference against Kentucky? Robinson will get to shoot, drive and pass on the court. He will have a full day of practice and match-up opportunities with Kentucky's smaller frontline, which will likely send UF's mid-range game aside early, especially with Jermaine Lawrence and Duke Johnson both seemingly out of the high post rotation. And he needs to be more aggressive. He was going to the rim, but he didn't finish or finish well. But Robinson is a good decision maker. He can find a small pocket in which to shoot, and when he does score, he usually makes his teammates better. UF needs him to prove he can make them better and not

Arsenic trioxide: a milestone in the history of new drug development. To avoid toxicity and long-term administration problems, arsenic trioxide (As₂O₃) was introduced into clinical practice as a drug of 'new paradigm' in the early 1990s. This agent appears to interfere with the bone marrow microenvironment, and gives rise to complete remissions of relapsed and non-treated patients with acute promyelocytic leukemia (APL). The molecular pathogenesis of APL is associated with the presence of a chromosomal translocation (t(15;17)) that creates a fusion gene (PML/RARA) involving the retinoic acid receptor alpha gene (RARA), which is thought to be essential for the differentiation of APL cells. Treatment of APL patients with As₂O₃ results in the rapid and irreversible degeneration of leukemia cells, and in the activation of nuclear matrix transcription factors and differentiation of the mature granulocytic phenotype. New compounds of 'mono-chelation' theory, and their distinct mechanisms of action, are being developed, and include ATRA, hydroxyurea, and cytosine arabinoside (Ara-C). A recent improvement in the treatment of APL was the introduction of all-trans-retinoic acid (ATRA) in combination with As₂O₃. The aim of this review is to describe the therapeutic history of As₂O₃, from its introduction as a drug of 'new paradigm', to the development of the available formulations, and to future perspectives in the treatment of patients with APL and other hematological disorders. { "name": "sigmund", "version": "1.0.1", "description": "Quick and dirty signatures for Objects.", "main": "sigmund.js", "directories": { "test": "test" }, "dependencies": { }, "devDependencies": { "tap": "~0.4.8" }, "scripts": { "test": "tap test/*.js", "bench": "node bench.js" }, "repository": { "type": "git", "url": "git://github.com/isaacs/s
