Expanded expression of the N-ras gene in rat hepatocytes in vivo during the compensatory hyperplasia response to partial hepatectomy. The transcriptional regulation of the N-ras gene was studied in normal rat liver and in the liver regenerating following partial hepatectomy. The steady state level of the N-ras mRNA decreased in regenerating liver after the initial phase of N-ras gene upregulation (first 6 hr after partial hepatectomy). This decrease in expression is accompanied by a decrease in the stability of the N-ras transcript. 3'-RACE experiments suggested that a 3'-untranslated region of the N-ras gene containing a CpG rich consensus sequence for methylation-sensitive CpG-binding proteins is present in the rat N-ras gene. An analysis of the methylation status of the N-ras CpG rich region in the regenerating liver shows that it is partially unmethylated. The promoter region of the N-ras gene was shown by transient transfection assays to contain functional sequences able to regulate the transcription of reporter genes in a cell type- and promoter-dependent manner. A transient transfection analysis of the N-ras promoter region in the hepatocyte-derived cell line, H4-II-E, has shown that these sequences are able to regulate N-ras gene transcription. This is the first description of a mammalian in vivo promoter region that is able to regulate its own transcription and, we propose, that this may be a general mechanism in the regulation of the N-ras gene.

NEW DELHI: The Supreme Court on Thursday reserved orders on the Centre's contention that the lawfulness of the Aadhaar Act cannot be questioned in court. The top court has already accepted the Aadhaar Act as constitutional. The apex court is hearing a petition filed by NGO Centre for Public Interest Litigation alleging the Act was being used by the government to deny the right to privacy of individuals and pass draconian laws. The petition alleged that the UIDAI, being an unauthorised body, was issuing itself as the data controller and was collecting, storing, sharing and selling of Aadhaar data of citizens and henceforth, the citizens have no right to privacy. Advocate Prashant Bhushan, appearing for the petitioners, challenged the constitutionality of the Aadhaar Act and sought a direction to dissolve the Aadhaar authority. In his rejoinder, additional solicitor general Maninder Singh said that the unique identity number is a voluntary identification and the Aadhaar Act is re-argument were considered and it is concluded that the following procedural rules were satisfied: *1403 Rule 1: Rule 1. It is the duty of the appellant in his brief and of the appellee in his reply to the brief to set out a clear and concise statement of the facts which form the basis of the questions presented on appeal. This statement should be supported by appropriate citations to the record, consisting of a certified copy of the entire contents of the trial court record. The standard for determining the sufficiency of a Statement of Facts and for the Court of Appeals in deciding that sufficiency will be whether there is more than a mere modicum, if any, of competent and credible evidence to support the Statement of Facts, or whether the Statement of Facts is so conclusory, vague and unsubstantiated that it is not intelligible. Appellant's Brief to the Indiana Supreme Court at 18-19; see also Rule 24(C)(5). Rule 2: Rule 2. Argument. The argument shall be structured in the form of a pyramid. The first paragraph of the brief containing the statement of the case should include a point or proposition for which the appellant is claiming reversal of the decision of the trial court, expressed in the conclusion of the argument. This point should be supported by citations to the pages of the record and to the authorities, statutes and other legal authorities relied upon, in order that we may properly ascertain your contention. Id. at 20. Rule 7: Rule 7. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT. The argument should contain the contentions of the appellant with respect to the issues presented, expressed in the most concise and accurate way possible and in such a manner that they may be readily understood by an appellate court. The argument should include not more than one clearly arguable issue per 15-page limit. Appellate counsel should divide their argument into as many concise paragraphs as is reasonably possible without sacrificing its clarity and verve. Each paragraph should be numbered and begin with a capital letter followed by the appropriate case citation. The argument must be free of legal citation and should contain no legal citation. Id. at 21-22. Rule 8: Rule 8. PURPOSE OF ARGUMENT. An argument should clearly track the language and substance of the issue or issues presented. Avoid prolixity and redundancy. Id. at 24-25. Rule 14: Rule 14. CONTENT. The content should adequately present the
