10/09/2020 - 08h24 Indonesia Category:Lists of Indonesian inventions and discoveriesT-Shirts, Sweaters and Bling: Compassionate Consumerism On Monday, May 8, on your television you'll see a full day of programming that will bring the animal welfare issue of meat, milk and eggs to life, spotlighting information from many different perspectives, including, for example, the views of a cattle rancher, an animal rescue group and an animal cruelty task force member. The hour-long special, Compassionate Consumerism, also includes commentary from renowned animal scientist Temple Grandin, founder of Grandin & Associates and author of the best-selling Animals in Translation and Thinking in Pictures, as well as Dr. Jack H. VanderPloeg, team scientist for the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) Grain and Feeds Program. (Full details of the program, which will be distributed to distributors as one in a series of animal welfare related "regulatory updates," can be found on the USDA website.) Besides providing a greater awareness of what's happening in the animal agriculture industry, the show will also show you how consumers—those who purchase food and other products, for example—can help animal welfare. For one thing, there are things you can do as a consumer to make an impact—and some of them don't cost anything at all. I would suggest that you watch the special. While plenty of slaughterhouse images are presented to make a strong case that commercial animal production is a cruel and unnecessary system, there's also a lot of information presented that shows how you can help animals in better ways. For example, there's information on how many animal shelters and pounds actually help animals survive and thrive. There's a lot of good information on how to help build compassionate communities, and what little price consumers pay is the price of compassion. This is all very disconcerting to people who are already made aware of some of the realities of animal agriculture. Many have adopted policies of veganism or other less-or-more-extreme approaches, and are simply looking for information and ways to further pursue the less-expensive and compassionate approach. If you're a vegan or a vegetarian, you'll likely be surprised to learn that it's possible for dairy products to be produced without animal suffering and 570a42141b
