Right Yaaa Wrong in 720p .Energetic cost of N-benzoyl-lysine adsorption on tungsten oxide. Proton-sorption experiments by combining external mass spectrometry, electrochemical titration and diffuse reflectance infrared spectroscopy (DRIFT) were performed to investigate the energetic cost of N-benzoyl-lysine adsorption on tungsten oxide (WO₃) in a pure or a composited system in order to facilitate the design of efficient water treatment processes based on N-heterocyclic aromatic compounds (NAHCs) as hydrophobic adsorbates. NAHCs and their corresponding N-alkylated homologues (NAHCOCH₃, NAHC₂OCH₃, NAHCOCH₂CH₃) can be used as promising, highly efficient and low-cost adsorbent materials for the removal of pollutants from water because their N-heterocyclic rings exhibit a hydrophobic character and their alkyl chains may effectively reduce the interactions between the molecules and the surfaces. The energetic cost of the first proton adsorption onto WO₃/NAHCs and WO₃/NAHCOCH₂CH₃ adsorptive surfaces is analyzed as a function of the pH of the water solution. These results are in agreement with the overall thermodynamic efficiency of the adsorptive systems. The interfacial properties and in particular the values of the DLVO parameter, the molecular dipole moment and the electron affinity of the adsorbing NAHCs
