Q: Yii framework rest API I've successfully created an REST API for one of my project, but was thinking of creating an API for the whole project I'm working on, including all controllers and models. This is a rather large project and currently each request goes from a separate controller, so there is a lot of code duplication. Anyone know of a good tutorial on creating a general API for yii, from creating the API structure, writing a simple GET/POST/PUT/DELETE function in a controller, writing the request, processing and the response? A: The Yii Framework has a REST API extension, that can be used to support REST requests that are generated by Yii (and the Yii Framework itself) actions. You can have a look at: What you need to do is to extend your Yii controller and/or active record model with that extension. From there, you can generate GET, POST, PUT and DELETE action using the provided functions. /* Copyright (c) 2004-2010, The Dojo Foundation All Rights Reserved. The effect of the 'private' versus the 'public' clinical competence in nursing. Nursing students (n = 89) completed a qualitative study of the influence of the 'private' (personal) versus the 'public' (professional) competence upon their perceptions of nurses and nursing in the clinical setting. The purpose of the study was to examine the way in which students perceive nurses and the nursing profession in relation to each other. The focus of the present study was on individual perceptions relating to their view of the nature of their nursing role within a private versus public health care context. A grounded theory approach was used to analyse the data. Data analysis revealed three analytical categories and 12 sub-categories. Data analysis revealed that the public versus the private concept affects the way in which nursing students perceive nurses and the nursing profession. The findings indicate that students internalise the 'private' and 'public' concepts, that the two concepts influence their clinical experiences and that a private nursing role leads to the development of a more personal image of a nurse. Implications for further research include the need for researchers to examine in a more detailed way the relationship between professional and private attributes. to connect with the technology and community on your own." If a priest has a traditional mind-set on the internet, he may find himself feeling increasingly disconnected from his parishioners. He will still have to figure out how to be a pastor online, but as he does so, he will be learning how to be a pastor in new ways that transcend the old models. The Rev. Jim Hutchison, rector of Holy Apostles Church in Newton, N.J., wrote about this in a Facebook post earlier this month. Hutchison is a seminary professor and former director of the Ph.D. program at Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia. Here is the excerpt that is relevant to the discussion we're having: When I was a student in high school in the early 80s, going to daily Mass was like a mandatory assignment at school, like English class and algebra. After a while you just did it without thinking. Today, though, when you go to Mass online, it's a very different experience. Sure, you can check your e-mail or play a computer game or just stare at the ceiling, but without the context of the sacramental presence, there's no community. This is why, as someone who went through the ordination process some 30 years ago,
