If you're really desperate to use Print Shop, consider downloading the trial version of HP Printer Driver. It includes printer and plotter drivers for more than 60 printers from HP. It is possible that you will be able to get your printer to print when you switch to HP Printer Driver. If you like using Microsoft Office and have some experience in it, try out the free open source alternatives. LibreOffice, Google Docs, Google Sheets, and Zoho.com are the most recommended ones. Most of them are free for home users. Q: Java Carousel div with picture Hi I am trying to make a carousel/slideshow in java. It has images and text inside. Text is at the top of the picture and I want them to have a picture or even a video next to the text so that its looks more real. Also I want it to be able to scroll right/left from one picture to the other. I don't care if there are titles on top of the pictures. The pictures are already made(though my code is not, but that's not the problem here). I will provide the text and the picture later. I am using HTML,CSS and Java to code. Thanks for helping! A: You could render a ListView of child components in a component. Children would be components that contain the text and the picture and you could update their state depending on which picture should be displayed. When a new picture is added, you could update the children components to display the new picture and then set the current picture. If there are titles, they could be children components too.
