That means it processes images as 2D grids of pixels, such as digital cameras and scanners. Photoshop uses different layers to allow for compositing, such as layering one image on top of another. Each layer can contain its own color, patterns, text, or shapes. Photoshop's default filename extension is .psd. To open files created with other extensions, such as .tif, try right-clicking on it and selecting "Open With." It's a layer-based system Photoshop is a raster-based image editing program, but it's built on layers. Layers are grids of pixels created in Photoshop, the same way raster images are. Photoshop comes with a program that enables the beginner to create layers with a design or text. When you first start Photoshop, you are given a large workspace. You are also given the option to switch between a console and a menu system. A console is a user-friendly interface that features a much larger workspace than the standard menu system. You can also resize your workspace as you need in order to make it more user-friendly. Layers are the basic building blocks that make up Photoshop. They are also used to composite images together. Layers are categorized in different layers of Photoshop, such as the Background layer, a Photoshop Layers panel, a Photoshop Layers panel, and so on. Each of these are unique layers in Photoshop. The Background layer is the Photoshop generic layer. It provides a nice canvas on which to place your next layer. You can't delete the Background layer, but you can

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CS5?

7 Baby Animal Most Likely To Give You A Run For Your Money After reading about how smart cows are, we knew we had to try to find a brighter species of animal that can outwit us. After studying mazes, rats and even mosquitos, we discovered that humans really can't get more than one step ahead of the little green men. We're here to say that we're not completely losing hope for our species, but our research does reveal the smartest animal on the planet.

1. Chimps Do you think that chimps are humans' closest genetic relative? If you answered yes, we're here to tell you that you're very wrong. The answer is the chimp because they are not only smarter than us, but their brains are bigger than ours too. And you know what they're also good at? Growing bananas.
2. Elephants Although elephants are the largest land animal, they're also not the smartest because they're very slow-witted. Given their size, they never have enough energy to perform at a high level on their own. Their brains weigh less than 1kg, which is about half of the size of an average human brain.
3. Crows You might think that crows are smart, but you can't count on them to help you out because they're actually quite lazy. They're also not as bright as they seem because they mainly use their brainpower to plan their next meal or catch a mouse. Although crows have some other tricks up their sleeves, they really aren't that smart.
4. Gorillas Gorillas are definitely more intelligent than crows, but they aren't brainier than most animals. However, they are very fast, which is their biggest advantage. They can move and flip two-tonne mammals up to 17 metres from the ground. By comparison, a human would need several months to do the same.
5. Baboons Baboons are one of the few species of monkey that can count and do sums, but they aren't that smart. Like gorillas, they're also highly intelligent, but they're still not that smart compared to humans.
