Do you often find yourself writing long strings of text in search engines and web pages? Do you often end up with a lot of text like this: This is a very common problem, and a simple solution is to select the text, and use the Edit -> Find/Replace... menu option. The process of finding the text in the document, and replacing it with a short (1 or 2 words) keyword or phrase, is called Keyword Stuffing. Keyword Stuffing Now, I know what you're thinking, but it's NOT that simple. Keyword Stuffing happens when you have a very long string of text that is actually a string of keywords, and you want to replace all of them. For instance, if you are trying to search a web page for "cross country skiing", and end up with a very long string of text (seems to be a search string) of "cross, country, skiing", you might actually have something like the following: Search terms are often specified in groups of 3, and those terms are often associated with specific meta-data. The basic concepts that are used to target groups of words, are grammar, synonyms, and spelling. You can then use these concepts, along with a couple of filters, to effectively find the right keywords 80eaf3aba8
