In this Photoshop Elements tutorial we'll show you how to create a background with a simple illustration in a black-and-white 3D style. The image we use is a free vector illustration by Russell Campbell that you can find in the attached zip file, Image Library Fonts.zip. In the attached video tutorial you can see how you can create a black-and-white 3D-style background using this image in Photoshop Elements. STEP 1. Create a New Document The first step is to create a new Photoshop file and then set the size to 300 pixels for a 4-by-6 inch image. With the image opened, press Ctrl+N to create a new Photoshop document. The new document is named Image 1.psd. We're going to use the Ellipse Tool (L) with the shape type Circle and 200 pixels for the diameter. We'll change the color to black. Create a second shape using the rectangle tool (M) with the shape type Rectangle and 580 pixels for the height. We'll change the color to white. Adjust the layer to Fit to Layers to get the two shapes to fit in the same image. STEP 2. Create the Simple Illustration Select both shapes (Shift-click to select the shapes) and create the simple illustration. It should look like this: Move and resize the shapes as you wish. Duplicate the layer (Ctrl-F6 or select Layer > Duplicate Layer) so you can make changes to one shape and have the other shape as a reference. We'll add a 3-D effect to make the illustration more interesting. STEP 3. Add the 3D Look Create a new layer above the top shape. The layer name is 3D. On the 3D layer create a new layer and name it Gradient. The Gradient settings are: Color: #e8a9f0 Opacity: 50% Blending Mode: Multiply Use the Direct Selection Tool (A) to select the outside of the top shape. Press S to select all the colors of this shape. If you press Ctrl-I you will see that a color swatch is created for each color. We need to get all the colors out of this layer so press Ctrl-I again and select All the colors to get them all out of the layer. a681f4349e

RS MEMBER DIARY Obama = Iverson From the Associated Press The Book of the Year nominees are in, and they include President Obama's remarks about the newly revealed CIA torture report. He didn't come out of a vacuum. The president went on the whole waterboard thing long before the report came out. His team, including his Chief of Staff, had been working on the strategy for months. Which should tell you a lot about both sides of the President's personality. In Denver, former Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld spoke out about the new CIA torture report and joined forces with Andy Worthington, journalist and author of the report. Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the political picture is the deal made by Vice President Biden on the Senate floor. In exchange for Senator Reid's promise not to filibuster the confirmation of anyone nominated by the President, he agreed to allow the Senate Judiciary Committee to hold hearings on the nominations of John Brennan to head the CIA, John McCain to lead the Armed Services Committee, and Chuck Hagel to be the new Secretary of Defense. Biden's approval of those hearings was a powerful negotiating ploy. It was akin to an offer from a desperate person, which, under the circumstances, would be a very interesting offer indeed. So what does the new CIA torture report say about the Obama Administration, and about the kind of people who work for it? Does it show new clues about how they think? About the nature of their relationship with the true enemies of this nation – China, Russia and Europe? The report reveals the lengths that the CIA went to protect its security officers. Operatives were turned into mice, and fed drugged milk and massaged with ice packs. For the same reasons that we are doing all these things with the prisoners, we were doing them to the men who tortured those prisoners. The CIA appeared to have a strong sense of civic duty, even when they didn't want to do it. Their sense of duty included acting the part of Nazi Gestapo agents, even though they weren't being paid for it. They tortured by failing to follow the law and holding themselves above the law. They treated detainees as their own creations, and used them as pawns to advance their own political agendas. The operational goals of the CIA were to further its political objectives, and it used prisoners of war as its own tools,
