What's New in the?

My prognosis has turned optimistic Recently I have discovered some changes to my cancer that could mean the end of this awful ordeal. I am going to post this so that anyone else who is going through this awful experience can also know that there is hope. I was diagnosed in 2002, I never smoked in my life, and did not drink or do drugs. I had been having symptoms for about 3 years. The feeling was upper abdominal pain, fullness in chest, cramps, back pain etc. That I knew. I went to a dermatologist who took a sample of skin and ordered tests. The tests all came back negative, but he believed I did have BC because of what I had told him, and he told me how I would be much better off if I did go into fulltime premenopause. I was told to come back in a year for regular checkups, but I had two moles on my right side that I could not quite figure out. I took them off and put another 8 on in its place. Still had the same symptoms. I went back and they took one of the moles and a breast lump. Testings came back negative. Doctor thought I might have caught some sort of virus when I did not feel good and thought I was having PMS. I asked him why were there breast lumps. He said some women are just prone to have lumps. That it was nothing to worry about. I also had some other pains, stomach pain, heart pain, and had the symptoms again. I went to see a doc. urologist about the pain in my back, cramps, etc. He gave me a pain killer and said it was UTI's. I went out the next day and about mid way home the pain was back and worse than before. Never had UTI's or any cystitis ever. The pain kept getting worse and worse. I went to the ER and had to have a cat scan. The ER doctor said it looked like cancer. At this time, the pain had gotten so bad I could not walk, sit, or lay down. I went to the cancer center and was given the hardest pill I had ever had to swallow, the wrong kind of pain killing, and was put on the schedule for radiation. The first day was very painful, but I did not think it would last this long. It lasted for 5 weeks. I was getting bigger and bigger
