Photoshop is the first choice for most computer graphics professionals and enthusiasts. What they don't realize is that there are many alternatives. Some are free and some are paid. Some have better features, and others are free but more basic. We are going to do a comparison between Photoshop and a few alternatives, including Photoshop Element, Paint.net and PaintCode. There are numerous other apps you can use, but these are the most popular and best known. How to choose between Photoshop, Element, Paint.net and PaintCode? Complexity The most important thing to consider is the complexity. Photoshop is the most advanced and well-known piece of software for editing images. Other alternatives may be simpler, but they may lack the sophisticated features. Features In addition, Photoshop is the most complete and efficient software. In many ways it outdoes some other popular alternatives, like Paint.net and PaintCode. You may have a better experience with Photoshop than with its competitors. It is the best all-around solution, and it is also the most powerful. It also allows you to create multiple documents. Paint.net and PaintCode do not have this ability. Interface The user interface of Photoshop is extremely well designed. It is intuitive and easy to use. Ease of use This aspect is a bit subjective, but it is important. Some of the other apps are much more intuitive and easier to use. Adobe Photoshop is most often used by a select group of users, and it is generally easier to learn. Requirements and OS The features and qualities of Photoshop are only truly available for Windows. It also works best on OS X. However, Paint.net and PaintCode require Windows or Mac OS X. Business use Photoshop may be the most powerful, most complete image-editing software, but it is not the best choice for business use. That should be Photoshop Elements. Elements is cheaper than Photoshop and can be used for personal purposes. It is not as robust as Photoshop, but it is still very usable. For businesses, you should use Photoshop. Pricing For most purposes, the price is not a major factor. Photographers would rather have the most advanced photo editor available than the cheapest. Business owners who are starting out would also rather invest in a higher-level software. Photoshop is still the industry standard, so most users do not need to consider this 05a79ceeff

Foxtrot Alpha invites you to preview parts one and two of this week's must-read articles. In Part 1, Robert Fisk, a senior fellow at the Independent Diplomat and an Independent Voices' Network speaker at the Urban Disruption Conference, puts the Syrian conflict in historical context. In Part 2, Susan Glasser and Jad Mouawad, senior foreign correspondents at the New York Times, report on an alarming rise of political Islam in France and the United States. Last month, Nick Artamanov, a Ph.D. student at Washington University, was awarded the prestigious IBM Ph.D. Fellowship. This summer, Artamanov was in residence at the Max Planck Institute of Metabolism in Germany, where he worked on a project directed by Walter Bodmer. In their paper, "A Direct Approach to Atomic Label and Probe Determination in Tetralogy of Fallot: An Application in <sup>11</sup>C-Norepinephrine Metabolism," published in the Journal of Magnetic Resonance Spectroscopy, Artamanov and his co-authors presented a new method to detect and track a metabolite in the blood by using (<sup>11</sup>C) positron emission tomography (PET). Tetralogy of Fallot (TOF) is a congenital heart disease characterised by the three following lesions: Absent pulmonary valve Right ventricular outflow obstruction Right ventricle hypertrophy The prevalence of TOF is 1 in 10000 births. Its treatment consists in surgical correction at an early age. A family of neurotransmitters, norepinephrine (NE) is released at the synaptic cleft to activate a number of receptors. These receptors are found in the heart, where they are involved in the regulation of heart rhythm and contraction. NE is the precursor of epinephrine, its biosynthesis is catalyzed by the enzyme phenylalanine hydroxylase. In TOF patients, the activity of this enzyme can be reduced. With the aim to detect this enzymatic deficiency, Artamanov developed a new methodology based on (<sup>11</sup>C)-PET, using norepinephrine precursors (NE Prec) and the (<sup>11</sup>C)-labeled substrate tyramine to explore the ability of the heart to turn this precursor into NE via the (<sup>11</sup>C)-PET tracking technique. The results of

Q: Get the best of both worlds (Meteor / Web App): Either split the data collection or add features? I'm currently working on a web application (mobile in mind) that will have offline and online functionality. It is supposed to go to the app store. (I'm the only programmer on this team. I'm not the only person who works on this project) I have already encountered a problem, and I want to share my experience in hopes to help others in a similar situation. (I couldn't find a question with this subject) For the application to run on the mobile web, the web app must have offline functionality. Since the data (in this case contacts and appointments) is stored locally (in a SQLite DB), when the app is offline, it should be able to display the data without the need for a network connection. The only issue is: If the webapp does not have offline functionality, the data must still be available online. For this case, I can either split the data collection (a bit like how Rails works) or I can add offline functionality. One of the benefits of splitting the data collection is that there will be less space required. The other benefit is that all data management (like adding users) can be done online. But the biggest benefit is that I can do whatever I want to my app (like removing unneeded functionality, etc...) online. After the app is released in the app store, the app can be modified at any time online. By adding offline functionality, however, I can program offline functionality into the code and it will only be available to offline users. I think that can make the app look much more professional for the app store. In case that the app is released to the app store, I can only change the app online. However, after the app is released, the app can still be modified online (just like in the above benefit). Is there anyone who could tell me how to choose between the two options? I am not the only person involved in this project, so what I am doing should not be contrary to the company policies. The company policy is: "If you want to do something online, do it online (without splitting the data collection)" A: As a developer, you have to make a decision. If you can do it online, then why not. The best reason is time. It means an extra week or two
