Vehicle drivshafts are typically constructed in one of two ways. The first way is to integrally cast a single piece shaft with a constant diameter or to form the shaft by cutting the length of the shaft from a solid round bar stock. A second way is to construct a driveshaft of two individual sections, a tube for rotational movement, such as a hollow steel tube, and a hub, which is attached in an end fitting at the end of the tube, for movement along the length of the tube. The two sections are typically joined together using non-integrally expanding fittings, such as spline type fittings. To withstand the high loads placed on the driveshaft, a wide variety of shaft materials are employed for the tubes, including low alloy steel, high-strength alloy steel, as well as aluminum. Existing one-piece and two-piece shafts have required a steel tube or tube sections for the drive shaft to withstand the high loads, requiring two different metal stock materials. When an aluminum shaft is employed to transmit torque loads in the high performance of vehicles, the shaft experiences a phenomenon that is known as "heat soaking". Heat soaking occurs when the

Q: How to get the total of all the numbers from a CSV file? Basically I have a CSV file which is sorted by scores (delimited by commas) from lowest to highest and I want to get the total of all the integers in that CSV file. So far I only get it to work for the first line, is there a way to do this for all the lines in a CSV file? Using VB.NET Thanks in advance A: The solution that worked for me is probably not the best but I'll post it anyway: Sub GetSum() Dim cnn As New System.Data.SqlClient.SqlConnection cnn.ConnectionString = "Server=(local);database=DB_Test;
