RAW Converters A RAW file is a raw digital file. It was designed to be a digital representation of an actual film image before it's been transformed into a digital file. The image file is originally recorded in its raw format and generally contains uncompressed data in raw or TIFF format. It may also contain uncompressed data in PSD, PICT, or other similar file format, and the data may be compressed. RAW files are in constant demand due to the advantage that they retain 100 percent of the original RAW data that an image was originally recorded in. They are used to create files of the highest quality and can be developed for any purpose, including final output. The benefits of using RAW files include the following: * **Advantages of raw data:** RAW files contain 100 percent of the original data that was recorded during the original recording. It can be edited and modified in any way you want and the results are still 100 percent of the original RAW file. * **Image quality:** The original RAW file retains 100 percent of the image data and includes all of its natural characteristics. * **Options:** RAW files contain editing and designing options that are unique to the RAW format. The downside of using RAW files is that they are more expensive to create than conventional digital files.

Adobe Photoshop is the most powerful and popular graphics editing software. It has a huge user-base, a huge library of features, and a complex user interface. It can make you a professional photographer, graphic designer or web designer. Can you use Photoshop without Photoshop? Yes, you can. Adobe has a tool that lets you edit images without Photoshop. This tool is called Adobe Photoshop Express and it is a free download. Photoshop Express does some of the basic editing that Photoshop does but it cannot handle the more advanced tasks. How do you find Photoshop? You know it when you see it: Photoshop's three-color logo does not look like any other three-color logo. Photoshop is a behemoth in the world of graphics software. It has helped many professional and amateur graphic designers create some of the most memorable images and design elements ever seen. So what is it? Well, there are two main Adobe Photoshop installations. The first is full-featured. The second is more targeted: its feature set emphasizes ease of use over flexibility. The full-featured version is better for the common user who needs to edit photographs, while the "basic" version is for those who want to create graphics. The basic installation won't let you edit photos and will, in fact, exhibit some of the most noticeable differences from the full-featured version. But it's there if you want it. Why do we care? In today's world, almost everyone has a camera with a built-in digital camera and most everyone has access to a computer. Photoshop is widely used, so you'll be among a large, passionate community. A free-to-download upgrade is available to those who need it. What is Photoshop? Like the name indicates, Photoshop is a highly specialized graphics editor that allows users to create, edit and manage digital images. You can use Photoshop for a variety of tasks: from graphic design and layout to photographic editing. Some of the most familiar examples of Photoshop work are advertisements, flyers, presentations, websites, photos, logos, and even graphic design. From Photoshop CC 2019 Photoshop is made up of a number of components: the software itself, the fonts, a collection of tools and brushes to create graphics, and a standard library of imagery. The image library was originally organized to make it possible to reuse the same image in different projects without having to create a duplicate 05a79cecff

Q: How can I select entities by value-property in Flutter? I have some classes with a value-property, e.g. Color class: Color { final double r; final double g; final double b; Color(this.r, this.g, this.b); } I also have a mapping of colors to positions in a sprite. var colorToPositionMap = {}; In my app I got a list of color values, and I need to show all positions that belong to those colors. I.e. I have a collection of colors, I need to show the widget in the position that belongs to that color. I tried to use for-loops: Iterating through the list, showing every color: colorToPositionMap = {}; for (Color c in listOfColors) { colorToPositionMap[c] = listOfPositions.firstWhere((widget) => widget.color == c); } Using indexing (and checking if index is in the list of positions): colorToPositionMap = {}; for (Color c in listOfColors) { colorToPositionMap[c] = listOfPositions.firstWhere((widget) => widget.color == c); } For some reason, none of these worked. It seems that Flutter caches the lists, so that I can't update anything. The result is that I got only one widget for every position. What I expect is that I have a widget in each position of the sprite with the color that is set in the colorToPositionMap. What is the right way to do this? A: With dynamic type: dynamic colorToPositionMap = {}; for (Color c in listOfColors) { colorToPositionMap[c] = listOfPositions.firstWhere((widget) => widget.color == c); } It has an error, but it works: I can't access the variable 'c' in the final condition, because it is not final. You need to add a final keyword before the assignment statement. With const type: const colorTo

Q: Iterating through a JSON object from a local file or server I've created a feedback form for my website. It's working fine. What I'd like to do now is add a method to it, so I can access the form data after submitting, and then iterate through all of the feedback data from the form objects. I'm not quite sure how to go about this, so any help would be really appreciated. Here's my code: $("#submit").click(function() { var loop=0; var new_id; // Take a snapshot of the current data in the form: var name=document.getElementById("name").value; var url=document.getElementById("url").value; var desc=document.getElementById("description").value; var is_invalid=document.getElementById("is_invalid").value; var parent_id=document.getElementById("parent_id").value; var feedback = document.getElementById("feedback").value; var the_object = {}; for(var loop=0;loop
