Since a single crystal of superconductors is homogeneous, the single crystal is expected to be applied to an electric apparatus such as a superconducting electric device, a superconducting magnet, a high-speed switching device, a superconducting magnet device, or a superconductor. As an example of a method for producing a single crystal of a superconductor, a liquid encapsulation method is known (for example, see Patent Document 1). In the liquid encapsulation method, a dopant, a solvent, a growth promoter, and a metallic salt as a source of a superconductor are heated to melt under reduced pressure to use a droplet as a seed to grow a single crystal. The temperature of the single crystal is kept to perform a desired reaction such as homogenization to adjust a composition of

By the way this problem also happens when some other languages are used but it's so so much worse because there are many words that start with some most common character on keyboard and then for example you search for "aÇ bÇ". I know I could use another software for searching but it would be so much easier if some other software could just use those languages too... I want to use some other software instead of that to do that. A: I solved this problem. I hope this answer helps others who have the same problem and use the same software (AutoHotKey). All I did was the following: change the keyboard language I wanted (via "Tools -> Options -> Language"). I did this because when I type something into the autocripts there were a lot of illegal keys being generated by autohotkey, save the script and created a new script. In the new script write in the %windir%\System32\ notepad.exe a dictionary file. change the language in the script to that of the keyboard. go back and create a new script. in the new script put the word you want to search from your dictionary file in the hotkey. Save the script and restore it back. reload the script. After doing this the script always works with the input language I needed. I even tried taking the dictionary from a different program but it didn't worked. I hope this solution works for others too.
