Q: In ListView bind to a model that is not based on List I'm pretty new to ASP.Net MVC and Razor and I was wondering if it was possible to implement a ListView such as this: @foreach (var item in Model) { @item.Date @item.Count @item.Average } But where the Model is a Dictionary, so, for example, it's something like: Dictionary Model = new Dictionary(); I have seen various ways of implementing ListViews using a Dictionary (and other related models like List), but I just want to know if there's a simple way of doing it. A: You can use as a View model public class MyViewModel { public Dictionary Model { get;set; } } Q: How to add two or more files in a folder I have a problem here. I have a folder with a list of folders inside. I

I want to be able to put a list of checkboxes inside a div like this foo bar Now I am stuck, because I don't know how to set a width for my boxes. As in my first guess I tried #mydiv { width: 200px; } then - when I set the divs width to be 20px to compensate - then the box doesn't show up at all. So: how do I display (or better: how do I make the checkbox take at least the same amount of space as its label? A: #mydiv { width: 200px; padding: 2px; } #mydiv input {
