Bacon Street Airport Bacon Street Airport was a public-use airport located in Fairfax, Virginia, United States. History Bacon Street Airport was closed in 1967 as part of a large-scale local government reallocation. A proposal to purchase the land for the airport and construct a new airport was defeated in 1965. The land was instead sold to Wright Flyer Corporation, developers of the Hickory Point Apartments. The company's plans included a commercial golf course, country club and tennis courts on the airport land. The plans were never realized as Wright Flyer sold the land after defaulting on its loans. The land was later acquired by the Fairfax County government. Bacon Street Airport was one of the original municipal airports in Fairfax County. Facilities and aircraft Bacon Street Airport was located in the Red Hill neighborhood of the city. The airport was at the intersection of Bacon Street and North Papadopoulos Boulevard. It had one runway, 18/36. For the 12-month period ending December 31, 2000, the airport had 5,870 aircraft operations, an average of 17 per day:

96% general aviation and 4% air taxi. At that time there were 38 aircraft based at this airport: 94% single-engine and 6% multi-engine. Monday, February 15th, 2013.It is the first day of my 8th decade!One can only hope that my days are numbered.................. I would like to start this year by thanking all of my blog friends who have been so good to me!As I grow older, I find it harder and harder to get to know people online.There are so many of us blogging world wide and I am finding it so hard to keep up with everyone.For this reason, I have decided to start a personal blog and only post on that one.I will still be posting on my two blogs and those two blogs are in constant transition.Hopefully everyone who left comments will still come back and read what I have posted.I am glad that I have the opportunity to share my thoughts with friends. Q: Why did this country stop responding to repeated PSAT scores? Why did this country stop responding to repeated SAT scores? While it seems reasonable for the government to protect a citizen from the danger of losing their rights, something about making the test repeatedly and receiving retest scores to no avail, makes this policy rather unnecessary. The United States' policy of sending people to jail if they don't pay their taxes could be viewed as a similar issue, but many people would claim that the policy is not necessary. Some might claim that the rationale is similar: protecting citizens from the consequences of their actions. The person who demands a retest will have trouble finding the next job, for instance. In the example above, is the rationale for sending people to jail for not paying taxes the same rationale for making the test? A: In the United States, people go to jail for not paying their taxes, and the crime is the failure to pay the taxes, rather than the failure to pay the taxes on time. The rationale behind that is that people have a moral duty to pay their taxes. If they don't pay their taxes, they are violating the natural law. In a civil society, they are subject to the punishments that result from that violation. If the government provided official expatriation or even deportation procedures, then they probably wouldn't be subject to any punishment. It is similar to the policy of not having a state religion. Having a state religion would be a violation of the basic principle of separation of church and state. There is a good case that the government can conscript soldiers for military purposes. But it is not a good one for making the case to parents that conscription is a good thing to do. There are other instances of this kind of reasoning. There are historical errors in the Constitution. These errors are not necessarily fatal. For example, there is no clear procedure for amending the Constitution. Yet, the Constitution is a valid document and we don't try to get rid of it. Friday, March 30, 2011 Aloha Friday! I chose some new colors for my new frames and currently have a frame in each of my living room and bedroom. Here is a picture of how I framed the ones in my bedroom, I used scrap strips for the frame and plastic to hold the picture in place. I like the way they turned out. This is one of my favorite pictures from Grace
