Q: What is wrong in this Fortran code for the "clipping" algorithm? I have to implement the following clipping algorithm: function P(a, b) result(res) n= b - a res=0 while (a+n.le.=b) res=res+n a=a+n end while return res end function P I try to implement this in Fortran and use the following algorithm: integer, parameter :: g=5 integer, parameter :: f=5 integer, parameter :: i=0, j=0 !function definition integer function P(a, b) implicit none ! parameters real(g) :: a,b !clipping do i=1,f a=a+r b=b+r end do !end clipping return end function P The following would be the main procedure: subroutine main implicit none !parameters integer :: f, g real(g) :: r !variable declaration integer :: r_clipped,r_non !finding length of the resulting array r_clipped r=0 do i=1,f do j=1,g r=r+r end do end do print*, 'r_clipped is ',r_clipped r_non= 0 do i=1,f r_non= r_non+P(r, r_non) end do print*, 'r_non is ',r_non end subroutine The problem is that I have to put a while loop in the subroutine main which I can't implement. I have an error with the loop which use the computed variable r in the subroutine main. Can you tell me what is wrong in this code? A: You should initialize r within the main subroutine: subroutine main implicit none !parameters integer :: f, g real(g) :: r !variable declaration integer :: r_clipped,r_
