They still live there today. While Frances was in her early thirties, the modern drama she wished to pursue was not yet fully developed. So, she chose to teach acting and directing to earn a living. Frances was a school teacher in the San Gabriel Valley in the early 1960's. After teaching for 10 years, she began acting in small films. In 1968, she and her husband moved to Malibu, California, where she continued to teach acting and directing and appeared in films. On the set of her film "Frankie and Johnny," in 1969, she met director Robert Altman. From this meeting, she and Robert Altman began their long and productive relationship. Frances and Robert married in a private ceremony on December 21, 1969. Together, they would be the creative team behind many of their best-known works including: The Long Goodbye (1973), Nashville (1975), and he Gilda Radner vehicle, Nashville (1975). She is the mother of Robert Altman's children; Paulina and Vanessa. After she and Altman divorced in 1975, Frances would go on to live with her son Paulina in Lake Arrowhead, California. On February 7, 1976, Frances Frances Altman died in Lake Arrowhead, California at the age of 45. Frances Terrell Altman Roles Agnès
